

Who we serve

We serve undergraduate and graduate students, post-doctoral fellows, and all academic and non-academic staff affiliated with the U of A.

Alumni and community members not affiliated with the University are supported on a case-by-case basis.

Read more about us on our webpage:

library.ualberta.ca/services/library-innovate

Explore our guide:

guides.library.ualberta.ca/library-entrepreneurshipandinnovation

Contact us:

innovatelibrary@ualberta.ca

University of Alberta Library

Entrepreneurship and Innovation Team

How we help

- connect you with the right campus and community partners,
- develop strategies for market and industry research,
- teach workshops related to entrepreneurship,
- create awareness of incubators and accelerators,
- explore technologies available through the library such as 3D printing, data visualization, etc.

Top row: Lisa Tjosvold, Debbie Feisst, Julia Wong, Denis Lacroix, Dana Ouellette. Bottom row: Céline Gareau-Brennan, Lydia Zvyagintseva, Patti Sherbaniuk

The University of Alberta's Strategic Plan has emphasized the strength and potential of the University of Alberta as a leader in entrepreneurship and innovation.

The University of Alberta Library would like to introduce you to our

Entrepreneurship + Innovation Team

library.ualberta.ca/services/library-innovate

We can partner on entrepreneurship and innovation initiatives across campus to integrate the many resources the Library has to offer.

Our team is made up of library staff from a variety of areas. We have extensively surveyed and interviewed many students, staff and faculty involved in entrepreneurship and innovation at the University of Alberta.

We define entrepreneurs and innovators as students, faculty, and/or staff working in process implementation or product/service development with measurable impact. This could include developing software applications, 3D model designs, creating business models, and more.